York endorses National Research Centre Institute

York Regional council recently endorsed a report outlining the Ontario Ministry of Research and Innovation's Strategic Plan and a recommendation to express support for the establishment of the National Research Centre Institute in Markham.

The proposed National Research Centre Institute is an example of a partnership initiative that supports innovation and convergence technologies. It will be the first National Research Centre facility to be established in the GTA and is the result of a collaborative effort between the federal and provincial governments, York University, the Town of Markham and other public and private sector partners.

The institute will serve as a catalyst for the convergence of life sciences and information technology to accelerate research, development, and commercialization. The objective is to drive new transformative technologies that will readily attract capital for commercialization and which have exponential and multiplier effects in the economy.

The Region will send letters of support to the Premier and Prime Minister to request that funding approval for the National Research Centre institute be expedited.
